TULIPS

(Darwin Tulips Long Stems)

We should like to lay particular stress on one point in connection with their cultivation. This is the importance of lifting and ripening the bulbs each season. Some bulbs do not mind being left in the ground from year to year. Many are all the better for such treatment. But tulips are invariably poorer if they are allowed to remain. They should be lifted when the leaves have turned yellow, and laid out on the dry surface of the soil. Do not lift them when the weather is wet. Above all, do not put them out on the soil surface on a hot day when the sun is too strong. Hundreds of dollars worth of tulips have before now been completely spoiled by being allowed to "bake" in too hot sunshine, when a little extra care would have saved them.

After lifting and drying, store the bulbs in a dry, cool, airy place until they are again wanted for planting. This will not be until the beginning of November, for unlike other bulbs, tulips do not gain by early planting. They are inclined to grow too quickly, and then to suffer from frosts, and for this reason planting is best delayed. When the bulbs are put in, be very careful to plant them deep enough. You can hardly plant too deeply—they are sometimes put as deep as fifteen inches without any harm resulting. If treated in accordance with these instructions, tulips will increase from year to year instead of deteriorating.

The Darwin Tulips are more noted for their bright colors. In the Breeder Tulips the wonderful bronzy, mahogany and violet tints predominate.

There is a growing demand for these "art colored" Tulips, showing thus a greater appreciation from the public for the magic, distinct beauty of the Breeder Tulips.

As the Darwin Tulips, most Breeder Tulips have tall stems, and have great substance in their flowers, and last a long time in bloom.

BULBS for ROCKGARDENS

Rockgardening, so popular nowadays, can be made more attractive by the use of bulbs, well selected for this purpose.

The bulb family comprises many kinds which can be used to great advantage.

Without Bulbs, rockgardens do not reach their prime until Summer, but when Bulbs are used the flowering period of a rockgarden will be extended considerably, as Bulbs produce a rich variety of form and color during Spring.

Deep, well-drained pockets of soil are required for planting the bulbs.

The following kinds will be found of special merit: Muscari (Grape Hyacinths), Eranthis (Winter Aconite), Galanthus (Snowdrops), Chionodoxa, Scilla, both the early flowering campanulata and nutans varieties, Fritillaria meleagris, Crocus.

Reminders For the Novice

Manure your soil adequately, but not at the time of planting. It injures bulbs, and sometimes sets up disease, to put them in contact with fresh manure.

Water indoor grown bulbs regularly. More bulbs are spoiled by faulty watering than by any other trouble.

Bonemeal is an excellent artificial manure for bulb gardens. Cow manure, very well decayed, used on sandy soil makes a good bed for bulbs.

Choose heavy, firm bulbs, in preference to large, soft ones.
